Jessica Caver Lindholm

I love to learn and expand my mind, so it's only natural that I love to read as well.

I used to read articles about wealthy and successful people and one thing that always stuck out was that they were avid readers and learners. I remember thinking to myself, "how do they have time to read?". I've realized that we only have time for what we make a priority, and reading is one of the biggest tools that has shifted my life, so I recommend making it a priority.

I personally love to listen to books more than I enjoy sitting down and reading. I like to listen while I'm getting ready in the morning to start my day off right, while I'm going for a walk or maybe cooking dinner. Reading is something that I do in 10 to 40 minute chunks for the most part rather than sitting down and spending a day reading a book. Probably because at this point I use reading more as a tune up to keep me on track rather than to totally shift my mindset, which is what I needed in the beginning.

When I started out I was reading hours a day, and even now, if I need confidence to move forward or take a big leap to the next level in my finances, then I'll turn on one of my favorite wealth consciousness books or an Abraham Hicks audio and listen until I feel differently about the situation.

No matter where you are, never stop learning, expanding and reading.

If you're just starting out with shifting your money mindset or you're looking to make some big changes in your business or life, I'd recommend 1-2 hours of reading or listening to wealth consciousness material a day.

If you're feeling awesome about your business and your life, love how everything's going and want to keep the momentum up, then I'd focus on listening to about 30 minutes a day.

Set a strong intention for what you desire and know that what you seek, is seeking you.

Enjoy!
